

Bright Ideas: Summer Fine Motor Fun

With summer rapidly approaching, it is always good to be prepared with some fun new activities for children when school is out.

Fine motor development is easy to continue over the summer months with a little planning.

Try a water fight using water bottles. Squeezing the bottle itself or the trigger of a spray nozzle is a great work-out for little hands.

Draw with sidewalk chalk. Mazes and hopscotch are great!

Get your child to help you garden. Plant some seeds and label the different plants with simple drawings. Then monitor the growth of the plants over the summer months. Make pulling weeds a fun activity - once your child knows what the weeds look like they can find and pull those weeds out!
